Dear Austin:

I am enclosing a Scientific Intelligence Digest with the thought that perhaps you would like to have it brought to your attention. You will note that the boys are carrying out your excellent thought that we should make estimates as to the probable intentions of foreign countries in order that we might concentrate our intelligence gathering capabilities to determine the actual trends of such countries. An example of this is on page 5.

I hope that we may get together for a golf game one of these days.

Thanks again for your participation in our recent panel studies.

All good wishes.

Sincerely,

W. F. Raborn
